SHERIFF BELLOTTI TO TAKE PART IN WOMEN IN LAW ENFORCEMENT CONFERENCE

DEDHAM, MA, Oct. 6, 2015 - Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti is pleased to announce his support of the Massachusetts Association of Women in Law Enforcement's (MAWLE) 12th annual conference. This year's conference is being held on Thursday Oct. 8 at Babson College in Wellesley and is being hosted by Babson College President Kerry Healey and Wellesley Police Chief Terrence M. Cunningham. More than 250 women in various law enforcement fields across the state will be slated to attend the conference.

Sheriff Bellotti has been a longtime supporter of MAWLE and is delighted to see their continued success with their annual conference and initiatives to promote professionalism in law enforcement and mentoring of women in the field.

Every year the MAWLE conference provides excellent training on current and emerging topics impacting the law enforcement field. This year's topics include a plenary session addressing the state of policing; bias and legitimacy, a panel discussion on recruiting, retaining and promoting women in law enforcement and workshops on the opioid epidemic, stress reduction for women in law enforcement and suicide prevention.

Sheriff Bellotti is honored to participate in this important event alongside the following distinguished speakers and guests below:

- > Maura Healey, Massachusetts Attorney General
- > Chief Mary Butler, Salem Police Department
- > Commissioner William Evans, Boston Police Department
- > Chief Brian Kyes, Chelsea Police Department
- > Commissioner John Barbieri, Springfield Police Department
